If I were a Mayor...

If I were Mayor I would get citizens to volunteer by handing out brochures that would explain the needs of citizens, why you should volunteer, and what you could do for the community. Another way is that I would have my own Mayor website that would be open to all people. One more way I could get citizens to volunteer is by letting your friend's parents know about it so they could talk in person.

The jobs I would give my volunteers would be Clean Up Day, a day where all citizens gather and help clean up parks, pools, and other places. Another job would be volunteering for a day where you could read to children or just help out at any school. One more job would be selling cotton candy or t-shirts at community fairs.

The way I would thank my volunteers is by writing a card or letter. This way they can remember being the Mayor's helper. Another way would be to give a small gift, such as a mug or gift basket. Lastly, I could tell the person how much they did and thank them.

Being a Mayor can be a a hard job, because you'll always have to try to make the right decision, but a very fun job in many ways.
